Section 1 – Planning and Public Input Process

Planning

Planning Approach

A collaborative team approach combining elements of a systems approach to planning with comparisons to established recreation standards was used to generate this master plan. The process began in June of 2018, with the formation of an internal team of staff members charged with the development of the plan. Major steps in the planning process included the following:

- Needs assessment survey conducted by ETC Institute
- Updates and revisions to data included in the recreation inventory, community description, and administrative structure sections of the plan
- Public, stakeholder and staff reaction and review meetings to synthesize input from assessment data
- Data analysis and comparison
- Development of the action plan
- Plan review and adoption

The Battle Creek City Commission, based on a recommendation from the Planning Commission, adopted the Parks and Recreation Master Plan update on January 22, 2019. A copy of the public notice and support resolution are included in Appendix C. The transmittal letters are included prior to the table of contents.

Needs Assessment Survey

The department’s planning priorities included identifying an accurate method of determining public recreation needs. The needs assessment survey was administered by mail and internet questions concerning citizen usage, satisfaction, needs and priorities for parks and recreation programs and services with an emphasis on determining “products” that would encourage physical activity. This approach provided feedback from both users and non-users of recreation services and ensured that the final plan would be representative of the entire community.

The survey questionnaire was developed with input from residents and city staff, including references to questions from previous surveys for use as a baseline. Four-hundred and sixteen (416) surveys were completed, using a random sampling that provided statistically-valid results.

Additionally, the complete needs assessment survey was placed online at the conclusion of the survey process. Those citizens not included in a random sample were encouraged to complete the survey at their convenience. The survey remains online as a tool for the parks and recreation department to track changing citizen needs and desires.

Public Input Process

Prior to the development of this plan, parks and recreation staff conducted eight focus groups, one with each of the Neighborhood Planning Councils (NPC’s), involving 131 residents designed to yield valuable information about the recreation-related issues facing the citizens of Battle Creek. The focus groups purposefully included representatives from various recreation and other community interests along with geographically diverse neighborhoods from around the community.

The focus groups were supplemented by a meeting with senior city staff and elected officials, and a meeting with parks and recreation staff. The meetings were designed to allow key stakeholders to provide “input” on the department’s strategic directives for the next five years. In all, over 267 people participated in the public process supporting the development of the needs assessment questionnaire

Public Review and Approval Process

Based on responses from the needs assessment surveys and community input gathered by the recreation department, parks and recreation staff convened a series of larger community meetings designed to confirm the messages received to date and summarize the information into statements to be used to form an action plan.

Public meetings were held on two different dates and offered at two different times on each of those dates. Another meeting involved the City of Battle Creek management staff and once these meetings were complete, an additional meeting was held with the Master Plan Advisory Committee. Complete details on the format and conclusions of these meetings can be found in Appendix B.

Action Plan

The Action Plan included in this document is a reflection of the summation of a variety of inputs synthesized into direct action items. The action plan is divided into two strategic priority areas; programs and services, and operations. Each strategic priority is accompanied by a series of goals statements, objectives and direct action steps. The goals, objectives and action steps were developed internally based on public and staff input along with directives from the previous master plan. The strategies developed in the action plan are meant to directly address the preferences of the community as articulated in the needs assessment survey.

The action plan also includes an evaluation component including performance measurements designed to assist the department in its efforts to implement the plan. The measures will allow the department to constantly evaluate its on-going performance and make the necessary adjustments to meet community needs. The measures will also allow citizens to hold the department accountable for its efforts on their behalf.

Finally, the action plan includes a capital improvement schedule listing the important facility and related expenditures that will be necessary to implement the plan. As with the plan action steps and performance measurements, the capital improvement projects identified are directly related to the goals and objectives of the plan. The capital improvement schedule also builds off the existing plan and is prioritized based on established city guidelines.

Public Approval and Plan Adoption

Once all relevant plan data was assembled a draft report was prepared for internal review by parks and recreation staff. The draft report included the appropriate maps and tables to support information contained in the community description, administrative structure and recreation/resource inventory sections of the plan, including data concerning the Americans with Disabilities Act assessment. The draft report was presented to the parks and recreation staff in its entirety, city administration, elected officials, and was offered to the public for review electronically, in hard-copy form at Willard Public Library and the Battle Creek Parks and Recreation office and at a community gathering held at Full Blast - the City's recreation center.

The final plan was approved by both the Battle Creek Planning Commission and the Battle Creek City Commission. The final plan includes a copy of the authorizing resolution from each body, meeting advertisements, and transmittal letters to the State and County.

Section 2 – Community Description

Community

Planning Jurisdiction

Battle Creek is situated 70 miles east of Lake Michigan at the confluence of the Kalamazoo and Battle Creek rivers. The City features lakes, rivers, streams, hills and farms, and the terrain is characterized by vegetation and forests. Although Battle Creek experiences the four seasons, the climate is moderated by the “lake effect.” Prevailing westerly winds crossing Lake Michigan warm the winter and cool the summer. A brief overview of other social and physical characteristics of the community is included in this section.

The Kellogg Company World headquarters, McCamly Plaza Hotel and the W.K. Kellogg Foundation world headquarters occupy the shore of the Kalamazoo and Battle Creek Rivers which run through downtown Battle Creek. A Linear Park stretches several miles along both rivers and connects open green space throughout the community.

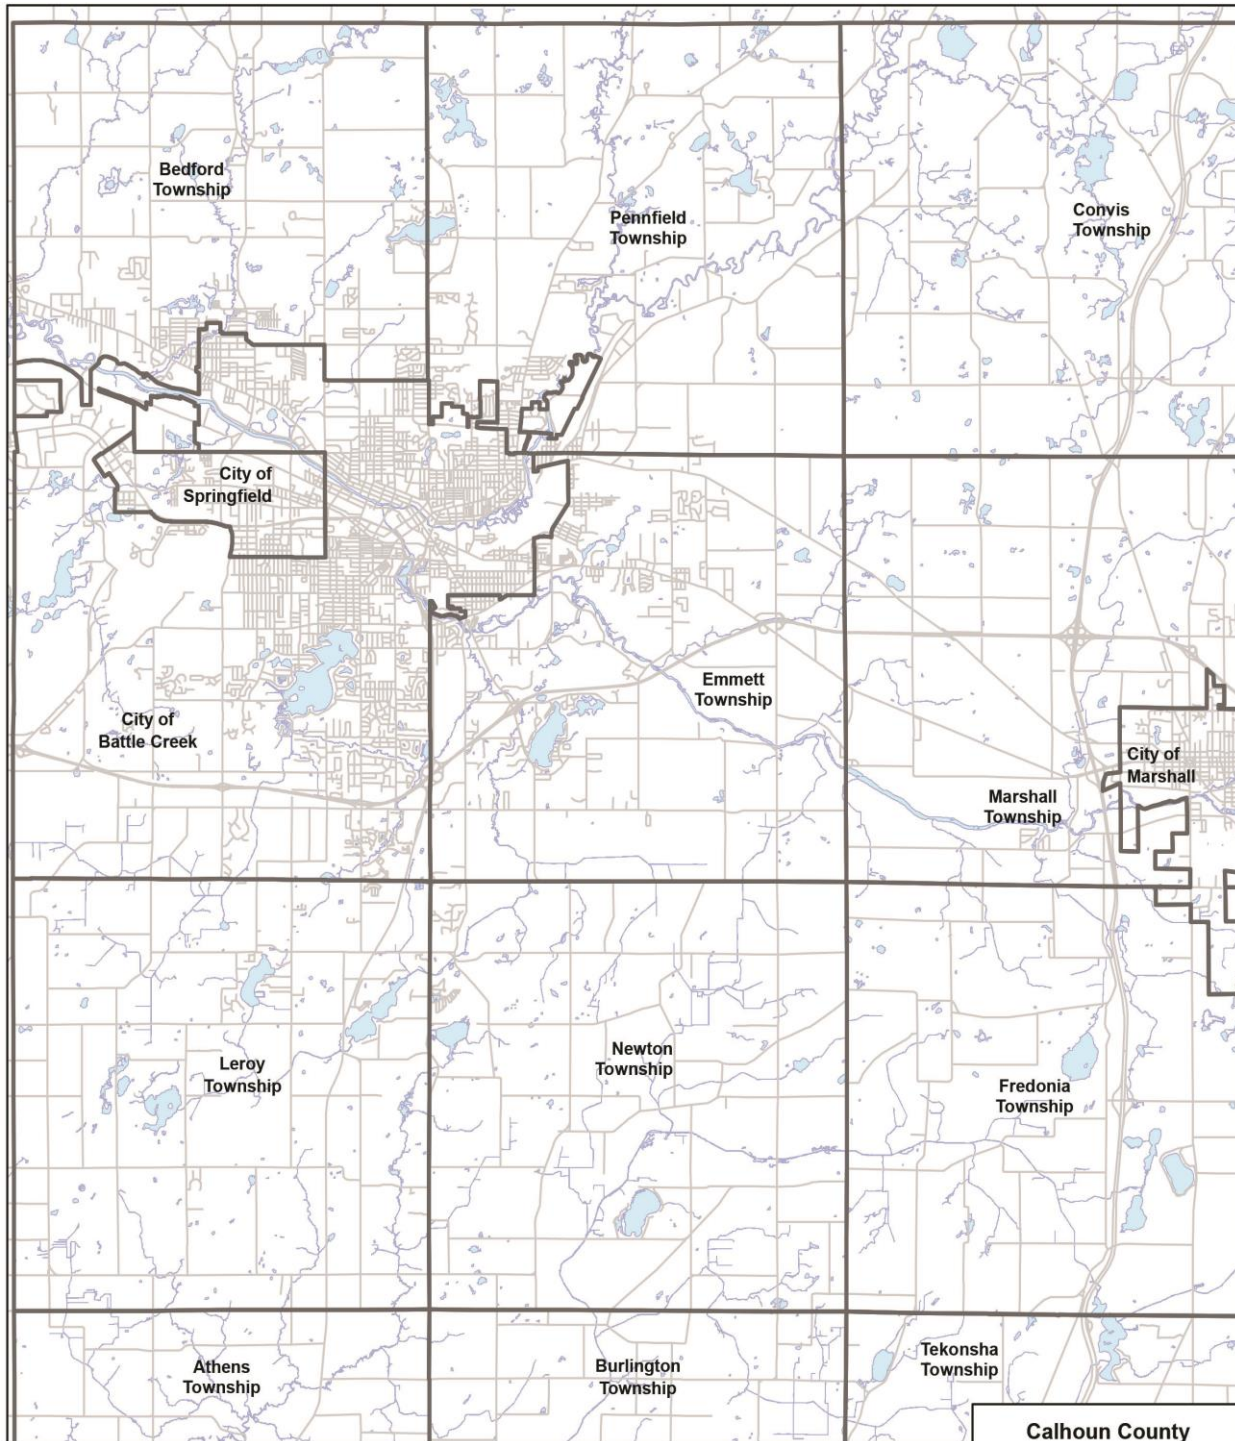

More than 200,000 spectators come to Battle Creek every summer for the International Hot Air Balloon Champions. Other festivals include The World’s Longest Breakfast Table, Taste of Battle Creek, Cruise the Gut, and the International Festival of Lights. The City’s Binder Park Golf Course is consistently rated one of the best municipal golf courses in the state. The City is also home to the nation’s ninth oldest symphony orchestra, the international renowned Battle Creek Brass Band, numerous auditoriums, a civic art center, and professional summer stock theatre.

Battle Creek Parks and Recreation is a department of the City of Battle Creek and thus its master plan efforts are generally intended to serve citizens living within the corporate limits of Battle Creek. Although the plan was developed primarily with these residents in mind, Battle Creek Parks and Recreation often serves a much broader audience including those living in nearby cities, villages, and surrounding townships (see Map 2-1).

Planning Focus

The plan was developed for the Battle Creek Parks and Recreation Department and was intended to include all the appropriate aspects of recreation. The Department continues to focus, through its mission, on improving the physical health and wellbeing of individuals, particularly youth, and thus the plan is designed to ensure the delivery of parks and recreation services that provide the opportunity for, and actively engage people in, physical activity.

With regard to young people (18 and under) the plan calls for recreation programs and services that actively engage users in physical activity. For adult populations, the emphasis is on creating awareness and opportunities to be physically active and to improve lifestyle choices. Services emphasized include maintaining green and other open spaces as well as an active trail system that facilitate physical activity. The department will actively promote and encourage use of the community’s recreation assets while espousing the benefits of healthy lifestyle choices. Direct programming services are reserved primarily for youth and families.

The community can also be accessed via freight rail (Canadian National and Norfolk Southern), passenger rail (Amtrak), and air (W.K. Kellogg Airport).

Battle Creek neighbors include the city of Springfield, Newton Township, and the Charter Townships of Bedford, Pennfield, and Emmett. The City serves as the employment, cultural, and recreation hub for the metropolitan area.

Information on demographic and socio-economic change in Battle Creek over the past several decades comes from a variety of sources, including the American Community Survey (ACS), the U.S. Census, the State of Michigan, the City of Battle Creek, Colliers International, and ESRI Business Analyst, a nationally recognized provider of business and market data.

Between 2010 and 2020, the population of Battle Creek is estimated to decrease by 588 people, which is roughly a decrease of 1.1% over the decade. This follows the same trend expected for Calhoun County, which is expected to decrease by 1.0%. Existing Land Use

A field inventory of each block and every parcel within Battle Creek was completed in the Fall of 2015. Based on a thorough assessment, existing land uses within Battle Creek were classified into 17 categories. A City-wide and neighborhood level breakdown of land use composition can be seen in accompanying Table 2-4.

The city of Battle Creek has a comprehensive plan which includes a Future Land Use Plan (Map 2-3) designed to encourage more compact growth with the incremental expansion of already developed areas guided through planned infrastructure extensions. The plan includes the delineation of a limited urban services boundary, beyond which full water and sewer to support intensive development is recommended.

Parks, Recreation, and Open Space

Map 2-3 illustrates an extensive network of open space corridors through the City. This “Greenway system” is designed to preserve natural resource corridors (stream channels, wetlands, wooded areas), provide open space relatively close to all residents, link existing and proposed parks and school sites, and offer linear recreational opportunities (walking and biking). The Future Land Use Plan shows six park preserves in the City, as well as three combined school/park sites, located in the southwest portion of the community.

Non-Motorized Transportation

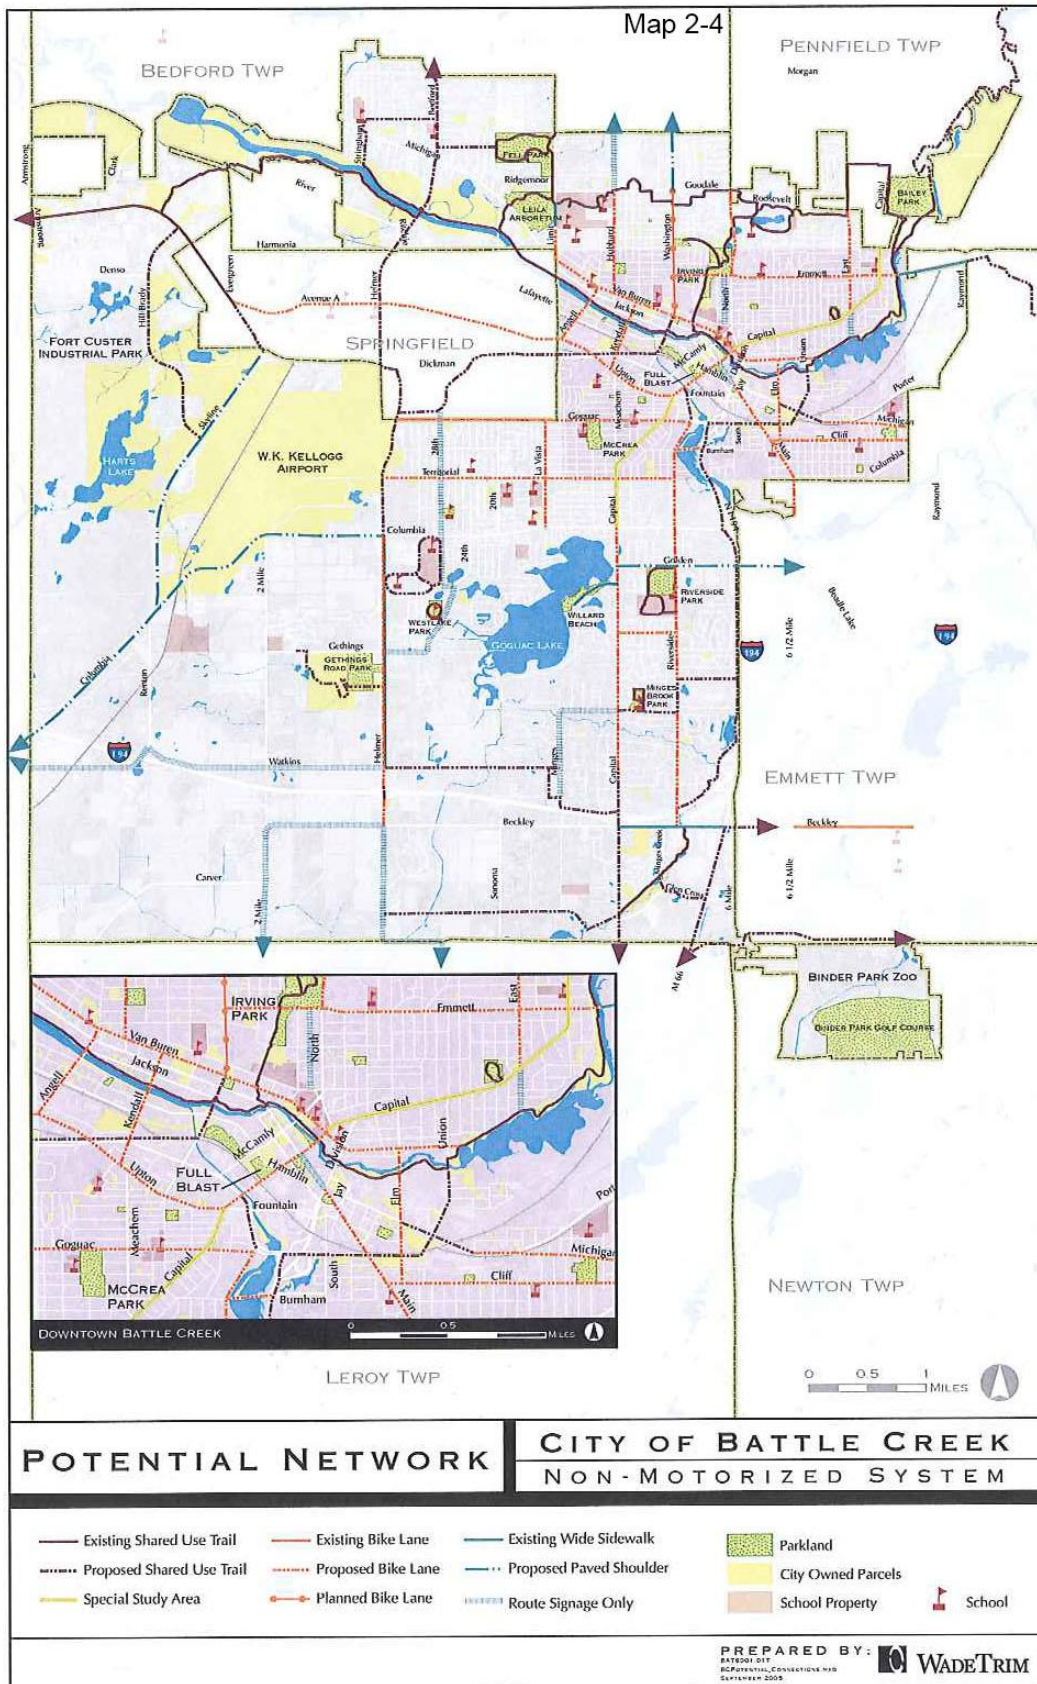

On March 7, 2006 the City Commission of the city of Battle Creek adopted the City of Battle Creek Non-Motorized Transportation Network Master Plan. The purpose of the plan was to develop a 20-year non-motorized vision for both on and off-road non-motorized facilities that would provide a convenient and safe option to link people, schools, business, parks, natural resources, and cultural and historic landmarks to each other as well as to adjacent communities and resources.

The goals of the plan include:

- Be implementation oriented and serve as a guide for non-motorized trail, bike lane, and route signage planning, funding, design, and construction
- Communicate in a highly illustrative manner, the vision, goals, and possibilities for non-motorized connections
- Communicate the various benefits of a connected non-motorized system
- Utilize community and stakeholder involvement and input to develop the non-motorized vision
- Utilize the plan to establish Battle Creek as a non-motorized friendly community

In the ensuing years the city has made progress on implementation in areas such as bike lanes and trail connections (Map 2-4).

Section 3 – Recreation Inventory

Rec. Inventory

This section describes the types of parks, facilities, and programs available in the Battle Creek area. The recreation inventory will be used as a guide within the Parks and Recreation department for programming purposes and to create awareness and provide opportunities to members of the public to get physical activity and enjoy a higher quality of life.

City-Owned Parks and Facilities

Table 3-1 provides an inventory of City-owned parks and facilities (including linear pathways) along with information on the “type” of each park and total acreage where appropriate

Figure 3-1 is a general information grid on parks and recreation parks and facilities

Table 3-2 provides an inventory of equipment and support facilities at each park or facility

Map 3-1 illustrates the geographic distribution of City-owned parks and facilities

Schools

Table 3-3 identifies each school building in the community by type and district.

Table 3-4 provides a full inventory of equipment and facilities found at the various schools as identified in Table 3-3

Map 3-2 illustrates the geographic distribution of each school identified in Table 3-3

Section 4 – Administrative Structure

Administration

Method

Battle Creek has implemented comprehensive community awareness and involvement programs over the past several years. The programs have resulted in clearer communication between the people and the government regarding community strengths and shortcomings. It has also provided regular feedback on the desires of the people and the responsiveness of the City departments. Each department has benefited by listening first, then taking action to better serve the needs of the community.

The Parks and Recreation Department has been the leader and the most visible proponent of the citizen involvement process. Many of the projects undertaken by the Parks and Recreation staff have been implemented after receiving considerable input from the citizens. This is especially true regarding neighborhood park improvement projects.

Mission

In 2007 the Parks and Recreation Department completed an internal strategic planning and mission realignment process. The goal of the effort was to ensure the distribution of departmental resources (both human and financial) in support of mission. Based on input from a variety of citizen-driven initiatives and an internal analysis of customer wants and needs the department refined its mission as follows:

Battle Creek Parks and Recreation is committed ....to providing recreation programs and services that improve the physical health and wellbeing of the individual and the community.

The department has allocated all of its resources to achieving this goal with a particular emphasis on getting young children physically active, creating opportunities for physical activity, and promoting healthy nutrition and lifestyle choices.

Organization

The city of Battle Creek Parks and Recreation services are delivered through the direction of a mayor-led, nine member City Commission. The City Manager serves at the pleasure of the Commission, providing the link between the direct representatives of the citizenry of Battle Creek and the professional staff. A list of the current elected City officials, administrative staff, and master plan advisory committee members may be found in Figure 4-1. Figure 4-2 is the organizational chart for the city of Battle Creek and identifies senior staff leaders and members of the City's strategic leadership team along with supervisory responsibilities.

The Parks and Recreation Director reports directly to the City Manager and is a key member of the City's strategic leadership team. An organizational chart for the Parks and Recreation Department is included in Figure 4-3. The Parks and Recreation Department is responsible for providing services in two primary areas to the Battle Creek community; recreation programming and facility management.

Staffing

The organizational chart in Figure 4-3 shows the organizational structure of the Parks and Recreation Department. The Recreation Services Manager is responsible for the management and programming of the department's recreation center, which includes an outdoor/indoor water park and fitness center, and programming staff. This position also is responsible for marketing and communications. The Binder Park Golf Services Manager is responsible for the operation of the City's 27-hole golf course.

Battle Creek has a full service Parks and Recreation department. There are a total of 12 full-time and over 250 part-time and/or seasonal employees in the park maintenance, customer service, and program assistant functions. Throughout the year there are numerous volunteers that help the department provide its services. Volunteers play a significant role in the delivery of a number of youth sports, camp and afterschool programs. Volunteers support both operations and administration for various local, regional, and national athletic and tourism related events and support certain fundraising and other revenue generating activities.

Budget

The budget for the Parks and Recreation Department is $4,390,089.00 in fiscal year 2017-18. The department is divided up into 19 different business units as noted in Table 4-1. Parks and Recreation is partially supported by a subsidy from the City's general fund and derives additional revenue from program fees, services charges, rental and lease agreements, grants, donations and other general fees. For the current fiscal year approximately 43% of the department's budget consists of subsidy from the City general fund. The remaining 57% is derived from other sources of revenue (including some interdepartmental transfers). The department's overall budget has remained relatively stable in recent years as has its general fund subsidy. Table 4-2 is a comparison of the three previous fiscal year budgets for Parks and Recreation.

Partnerships

The Battle Creek Parks and Recreation Department believes strongly in collaborative partnerships that extend the department's reach and allow it to leverage its limited resources to impact the greatest number of people. The department has worked hard to form partnerships with recreation providers and other like-minded organizations with similar mission directives. The department pursues strategic partnerships that allow it to provide the broadest and best quality recreation services to the people of Battle Creek. Based on established policies, parks and recreation staff have formed dozens of partnerships in recent years, all of which are currently active and are producing positive results for the community. Table 4-3 provides an overview of the department's various partnership efforts.

Policies and Procedures

The operations of the Parks and Recreation Department, as well as the services it offers to the public, are governed by a number of administrative and procedural policies. As a department of city government, Parks and Recreation is subject to the administrative policies of the City in such areas as personnel and purchasing. The department also has a number of internal administrative policies articulated in such documents as the Parks and Recreation Revenue and Memorial and Donations Policies. Additionally, the department is subject to the laws of the State of Michigan where applicable.

The department's revenue policy provides detailed direction on the various aspects of managing revenue sources and includes policies for determining cost recovery standards, establishing and collecting fees, facility and equipment rental, sponsorships, grants and donations, and contractual relationships. The department's partnership policy provides standards and guidelines for collaborative initiatives and specifies the conditions under which that department will seek and enter into partnership relationships. Various other miscellaneous policies govern programmatic issues and parks and facility maintenance and use.

Section 5 –Goals and Objectives/Action Plan

Goals & Objectives

Planning Strategy

The Battle Creek Parks and Recreation Department embarked upon its 2019-23 master planning process with a desire to build on the successes of the previous five years. Rather than pursuing an entirely new strategic direction, the department sought to capitalize on the citizen-driven directives in its current plan as well as align the distribution of its resources with broader community goals established through similar community-driven processes.

In 2015, two hospitals that share Calhoun County as a service area – Bronson Battle Creek and Oaklawn Hospital, came together to conduct a community health needs assessment (CHNA). The hospital health staff, working with several additional community partners, gleaned information by reviewing quantitative data from US Census, Michigan Department of Community Health, and local county health departments as well as a region-wide survey, available on-line and in paper form that generated 3,190 completed responses.

The hospital health staff also sought input directly from medically underserved, low-income, minority populations, and other community representatives. The interviews, focus groups, and data reviewed by the staff revealed several areas where the health and health-related behaviors of Calhoun County residents could be improved, and that overweight and obesity were in the top health issues in the county. The staff recognized, as did focus group and interview participants, that to address overweight and obesity, the health issues of physical activity and nutrition would also have to be addressed.

The staff findings reflect the community's awareness and concern for the impacts of poor lifestyle choices on current and future generations. Despite Battle Creek's proactive approach, both regionally and national, health concerns related to poor lifestyle choices continue to grow. Calhoun County has an obesity rate that is 4% higher than the state average and a higher percentage of residents who fail to participate in the recommended amount of daily physical activity than the state average.¹

In addition, the prevalence of obesity in the adult population is spreading to children putting young people at an increased risk of having other chronic health conditions and diseases that influence physical health. These include asthma, sleep apnea, bone and joint problems, type 2 diabetes, and risk factors for heart disease.² Data from 2015-2016 show that nearly 1 in 5 school age children and young people (6-19 years in the United States has obesity.³ A much greater number of children are now suffering from diseases that were once thought to only plague adults.

¹Michigan Department of Community Health, combined 3-year estimates (2011-2013, 2012-2014), 2014 MiBRFS Tables and CDC 2014 BRFSS

³Hales CM, Carroll MD, Fryar CD, Ogden CL. Prevalence of obesity among adults and youth: United States, 2015-2016. NCHS Data Brief. 2017;288:1-8

For these reasons, as the Parks and Recreation Department began the development of its master plan, it sought to continue its recent emphasis on community health needs. It is clear to the department that physical fitness and healthy lifestyles remained a high priority among citizens and that a focused and strategic approach is needed. The intent is to respond to the current and previously articulated citizen needs in a more purposeful way while building on past efforts.

As the plan was developed the department sought to continuously re-enforce the impact of the mission on its strategic action steps. Citizens were not only asked to rate parks and recreation services but to provide input on how the department could improve physical health and promote healthier lifestyle choices. By doing so, citizens played an active role in defining the department's future, based in part, on the department's most recent past. This approach was instrumental in determining strategic areas and specific actions steps that continue the department's current momentum and ensure its place as an essential service provider to the community.

The Strategic Directives, as well as the Goals and Objectives of the plan are gleaned from input from a variety of sources including the current plan, the 2018 Needs Assessment survey, members of the public (in public forums), Parks and Recreation management staff, and members of the Master Plan Advisory Committee. The social and physical characteristics of the community reviewed in Section 2 also played an important role in shaping the action items. The goals, objectives and related action steps place particular emphasis on improving the physical activity levels and healthy lifestyle choices of youth.

Strategic Directives

Primary Directives

All of the goals, objectives and action steps included in the plan are driven by three overarching primary strategic directives:

- (D1) Emphasize the physical recreation environment
- (D2) Leverage assets through partnership
- (D3) Develop structures that support self-directed recreation

Each strategic directive reflects a common thread woven throughout the various information gathering sessions held during the public input process. Emphasizing the physical recreation environment means investing in the park system by improving physical facilities, maintenance, and safety to facilitate the use of natural environments in support of physically active lifestyles. Leverage assets through partnerships means extending the department's reach by impacting more people through cooperative and collaborative arrangements with a diverse set of recreation providers. Developing structures that support self-directed recreation means emphasizing non-structured over structured programming for certain constituents to encourage great participation.

The following goals, objectives and action steps tie back to these strategic objectives and are further categorized as either part of Programs and Services or Operations (administration).

Evaluation

As part of the master planning process the Battle Creek Parks and Recreation Department is committed to providing the City's residents with timely and accurate information about its performance so that citizens can adequately assess how the department is doing.

Additionally, the department is interested in developing a system that will allow staff to improve performance by measuring the efficiency and effectiveness with which it delivers services. By establishing certain performance measurements as part of its five-year plan, the department believes it can promote greater understanding of its mission, goals and objectives, strengthen its accountability to taxpayers, and improve overall performance.

The performance measures established in this plan are directly related to the goals and objectives identified above. The department intends to calculate, analyze and report on the measures on an annual basis in an effort to determine how well the department is meeting its directive to provide programs, services and operations in support of individual and community health and wellbeing (an overview follows on the next two pages).

Capital Improvement Projects

The capital improvements contained in the 2019-2023 Master Plan are intended to provide physical facility support to the goals and objectives included in the Action Plan. Much like the Action Plan, the Capital Improvements Plan is a reflection of input from a variety of sources and incorporates several remaining priorities from the current master plan.

The plan is broken down into year-by-year increments with each proposed project coded to reflect:

- Its priority as determined by a ranking system approved by the Battle Creek City Commission and used to prioritize spending on capital improvement projects city-wide
- The potential source(s) of funding for the project
- Its direct relationship to goals and objectives established in this plan.

The Battle Creek Parks and Recreation Department seeks to leverage and combine a variety of funding sources in its efforts to implement the Capital Improvement plan. Projects are completed if and when resources become available.

City seeks recreation, parks input in new survey

BATTLE CREEK, Mich. — Are you interested in fishing, baseball, or nature walks? Have you participated in any of these activities? These are some of the questions the city is asking the community in a survey about parks and recreation needs.

The survey is part of the city Recreation Department's ongoing master plan process. This will help the department develop a strategic guide to provide recreation programs and services that improve the physical health and well-being of the Battle Creek community.

The plan involves an inventory of related programs and services; consideration of the structure of the department's staff, budget, and collaborations in the community; and an action plan for the next five years.

Gathering public input is part of any master planning process, and recreation staff have attended Neighborhood Planning Council meetings this fall. A draft plan will be released this winter, with time for public review, and the department will hold open houses to discuss the draft with the community.

The survey is now available on the city's website, battlecreekmi.gov. Scroll down to the City Spotlight section at the bottom of the home page. Contact the Recreation Department with questions at 269-966-3431. McKenna Associates Inc., of Northville, is the city's consultant for the master plan project.

Summary of Citizen Comments

The following is a summary of citizen comments received during the public review period from December 10, 2018 through January 15, 2019.

I wonder why there are so many parks and recreation programs on the north side of town and very few on the south side of town?

I do not consider school playgrounds as “parks” myself because they are not inclusive to all neighbors at all times. They do not offer all services of a park setting.

We all recognize that very small children need socialization and parks can offer that with neighborhood children. Neighborhood parks where parents and caregivers could walk to the park and offer children a place to interact and form friendships, exercise and some fresh air in a safe environment. Parents can meet neighbors and feel a part of their neighborhood and Battle Creek. Solve problems and share information.

Property taxes are high and it would be refreshing to see something given back to neighborhoods. A good thing indeed.

The City’s Linear Path is a great asset to the City. It would be nice to have regular upkeep on it.

A dog park would be a great addition to the City.
